The world health report 1996 - Fighting disease, fostering development

The 1996 report focuses on infectious diseases

- old and new - which together represent the world's leading cause of premature death. Examining these diseases by modes of transmission, the report calls for renewed efforts and extra resources to combat them and thereby help to reduce poverty and foster development.

The world health report 1997 - conquering suffering, enriching humanity

The focus of this report is on noncommunicable diseases. Together with infectious diseases, they form a double burden for developing countries, and are increasing rapidly among poorer populations.

What's new

Health as a pre-requisite for development and maintenance of peace and stability

What's new

Concept of Global Health:

Understanding the international transfer of health risks

Interdependence among all countries

the movement of people, products, resources, and lifestyles across borders can contribute to the spread of disease

No country can tackle single-handed domestic health

Julio Frenk, M.D., M.P.H., Ph.D., and Suerie Moon, M.P.A., Ph.D.

What's new

Traditional model of 'vertical' interventions addressing selected targets relying on donations collapsed following economic crisis in the West

Shift:

- from humanitarian aid to sustained development
- From vertical interventions to integrated services
